Edmund of Salem, Mass. 1633. Most of the early Marshalls in New Hampshire seem to be either descendants of John Marshall of Billerica or Edmund Marshall of Salem. There is a similarity in given names. William Marshall owned shares on Plum Island and the William recorded in Charlestown, Mass seems to have been a seafaring man. Perhaps he was a son of William of the Abigail and their seafaring life accounts for the scarcity of records.

Chief Justice John Marshall of Virginia was evidently descended from the Irish branch of the family.

Calnek gives the following--"Marshall-- This name is derived from title "Mareschall" and the English, Irish and Scotch Marshalls claim descent from Roger le Mareschall or the Marshall who at Hastings arrayed the forces of the Conqueror for the battle. The title Earls Marshalls of England became hereditary in the family and by the marriage of William the Protector, with the only daughter and sole heiress of Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke and Eva his wife; they became Earls of Pembroke in England. In Ireland members of this family were Princes Palatine of Leinster and the title of Marshall of Ireland became vested in a younger branch by letters patent."

Any aid that anyone can give us would be greatly appreciated.

Notes on First Ancestor 1676584

Various authorities have set forth claims as to the father of John Marshall of Billerica. One party says John who came on the Mayflower in 1633, age 14 and gives John of Billerica as being born in 1619. It does not seem possible that he would receive a grant of land when eleven years old, and it does not agree with his tombstone record which says he died Nov. 6, 1708, age 70 yrs.

Farmer says that John Marshall may have been a son of Thomas Marshall of Reading. While there are two or more Thomases in Reading, none of them seem to have other children born before 1640. It hardly seems possible that there would be eight years between the birth of children in colonial times.

Our guess is William Marshall who came on the Abigail in 1635 from Cranbrook, Kent, England, age 40 yrs. Calnek in his History of Annapolis County, Nova Scotia says William Marshall was the ancester of four brothers who settled there in 1760. These brothers were William, Isaac, Solomon, and Anthony. We have met descendants of Solomon in Boston who claim he was a great-grandson of John of Billerica. They do not seem to be familiar with Calnek and at this writing am waiting for their opinion. There is a tradition in the family of connection with Nova Scotia and originally coming from Kent. There also seems to be some connection with Charlestown, Mass. and maybe the William recorded there was a brother of John of Billerica. There is a record of one of John Marshall's children being born in Charlestown, Mass.

William Marshall who came on the Abigail was in Salem in 1636 and some authorities believe him to be a brother of
